

A FRAUD DISCOVERED

By DAVID WALTER CHURCH

Rose Thornton and I were schoolmates and chums. I say chums because we were very young and at that time our friendship had not ripened into love. Rose's mother died when she was a child, and her father married again. The love of her mother and her father's second marriage made the poor girl's life a very unhappy one.

Her stepmother was a selfish, crafty woman who treated her as if she were in the way, and I am not sure but that if she could have got rid of her without injury to herself she would have done it. Mr. Thornton himself had cause to regret the step be had taken in marrying the woman, and there was a perpetual quarrel going on between husband and wife. Rose | would have gone to live somewhere else had not her father begged her to stay

Doubtless Rose's making a confidant of me and my sympathy drew us together and made lovers rather than friends of us. Mr. Thornton was worth something like a hundred thousand dollars, a part of which would and finger to learn its texture, then provided the stepmother didn't beat her lines. I had no sooner touched the one to resone the miners and was killed by FOUR CORNELL out of it. Rose repeated certain con- and seen the other than I recognized the second explosion. versations she had had with her father the paper on which the will was writon the subject of the inheritance, from which I inferred that nothing deterred him from leaving all his property to Rose but the fear that his wife would break the will. He preferred to let the law divide his property since it would give his widow a third and his daughter two-thirds. This plan seemed safer than any other. When Rose was nineteen and I twenty-two her stepmother treated her so inhumanly that she was obliged to leave the house, which she did with her father's reluctant consent. Rose thought that he would apply for a divorce were it not for the fact that he had no cause which would come within the law, and his wife took care to give him no such cause. Any such attempt on his part would undoubtedly cost him

Rose and I would have been married but for the fact that I had been unlucky in the business positions I had occupied. Two different firms in whose service I was rising failed successively. I was now with the third, the agent of paper mills, and just getting a hold on the good will of my employers. So Rose went to live with an PET CAT'S DEATH aunt till I could take care of her.

The position she occupied with reference to her stepmother was very irritating to me since it was so wearing upon my sweetheart. I longed to take some sort of vengeance on the "old cat," as I called her, but could do nothing in the premises. I could prepare myself to give Rose what Mrs. Thernton deprived her of, and that was all. However, Providence, fate or whatever

But when no will was found I believed I had misjudged her and concluded that her husband had will. Several months passed, during which the courts were engaged in settling the estate, and Rose and I were congratulating ourselves that she would receive two-thirds of the estate or be tween $60,000 and $70,000.

Then all of a sudden the widow pro duced a will executed several years before her husband's death, leaving all the property to her except some swamp land of no value to Rose. I believed the moment I heard of this will that there was fraud in it and advised Rose to contest it. I got a lawyer to take the case, but he said that if it was a forgery the woman had done it so cleverly that there was no hope of proving her guilty. Rose, who dreaded and feared her stepmother, was opposed to taking any legal steps in the matter. Before giving it up I was determined to examine the will and went to the court for the purpose.

I had long been hungry for revenge upon her on Rose's behalf and now was merciless. I gave her a choice of turning over the whole estate to Rose or going to the penitentiary.

She chose the former course. Rose and I celebrated our wedding ander very happy circumstances. Rose wished to give up to her stepmother her widow's third, but I put my foot resolutely down on such magnanimity.

Belle Valley, Ohio, May 19.—Thirteen bodies had been recovered from the mine of the Imperial Mine company last night where Saturday night 50 persons were killed and the interior of the mine was badly wrecked by two explosions.

It is believed all the miners were killed by the possibilities of a boy are beyond the power of language to describe or measure, especially the possibilities of an American boy, for nowhere else in the world has the individual a greater opportunity to come into touch with and influence his fellowmen, and in no former age was this possibility of service greater by the first explosion.

Thaw's insanity was dwelt upon by Arthur C. Palmer in summing up for Anhut. He asked the jury to disregard Thaw's testimony on the stand, in view of his mental condition. He held that Anhut was a victim of circum-tances brought about by Thaw and Dr. Russell and had acted honestly as Thaw's countering the power of language to describe or measure, especially the possibilities of an American boy, for nowhere else in the world has the individual a greater opportunity to come into touch with and influence his fellowmen, and in no former age brought about by Thaw and Dr. Russell and had acted honestly as Thaw's countering the power of language to describe or measure, especially the possibilities of an American boy, for nowhere else in the world has the individual a greater opportunity to come into touch with and influence his fellowmen, and in no former age.
